

Do the Angels Ever Come?

in a Nation.

Do they think the Angels come
And hover round our beds,
And look with eyes of wonder Upon our pillow'd heads?

Do they say their hands upon us,
They have no trouble down,

Do they bring from one toward home
The bright birds and flowers?

Do they over city bounds upon us,
Their arms open, and bold,

The many over sea and wide
Come with a welcome?

A lady kicked her husband out of doors at Jackson, Tenn., the other day. This was a wise.

She might have prepared his head for a wig, or mellowed his bones with a broom-handled poker, but to kick him was unladylike.

An ill-used husband around the Ida, Kansas, Register office, makes this observation: "If Susan B. Anthony and her confires get shut up to prison for illegal voting, we know lots of men who will urge their wives to try voting next time."

A lady who has a pretty hand is anxious to know if a person is more likely to burn her fingers because they are paper coats. We don't know, but it is probable that she should be careful how they come in contact with sparks.

Miss Addie Taylor, of Bridgeport, Conn., attended a Frenchman who was sick of small-pox a few months ago, and now he has given her a fortune of $50,000. As a result all the girls in Connecticut are looking for small-pox cases.

of the Assembly. The Minister of the Interior tells the Chamber that the best way to stay the outflow tide is to make such laws as will cause the people to leave France above all other countries.

Edwards has introduced a resolution in the Senate to compel the railway companies to pay interest due the United States. It was opposed by Stewart, Trembley, and Sherman, and various amendments were offered, but no final course was adopted by the Senate.
